ALUMINIUM SURFACES (POWDER-COATED)

Aluminium is a silver-white, light and soft metal. Although it is corroded by acids and bases, it is to a large extent not sensitive to corrosion as a thin, adhesive oxide layer spontaneously forms. Aluminium is sometimes coated by the manufacturer in order to provide protection, and for decorative purposes. Various varnish and plastic systems may be used for this, e.g. polyethylene, which is sprayed onto pre-heated parts in powder form, using compressed air.
